

THREE WOMEN HOLD UP AND ROB TWO MEN

Beat Brooklymites on Street, Relieve Them of Cash and Jewels.

William Potter, of No. 160 Twenty-second street, Brooklyn, was going to his home when, at Hudson and Myrtle avenues a young negro woman approached. Potter walked past her and was suddenly seized from behind. Before he could defend himself two other negro women darted out of doors and fell upon him. One held his hands over his mouth so he could not call for help. A second clutched his throat and choked him until there was little fight left in him and the third beat him with her fists until he sank to the walk.

The woman quickly searched his pockets and secured $3 in money and a diamond pin valued at $150. When Potter could walk he made his way to the Myrtle avenue police station, and detectives were sent out. One of them soon came upon Kate Anderson, a negro Amazon, and arrested her. The woman had hardly been got into the station before a second victim of the robbery was brought in. He said he was J. G. Hagan, of No. 161 Eighty-sixth street.

It is understood that he was passing when a negro woman stopped him and tried to give them battle but was no match for them. He was chased and beaten, but he continued to fight until a negro ran out of a doorway and dealt him a violent blow on the head. Anderson and one of the women then went through his pockets and secured $15 in cash.

When the second robbery was reported the police and detectives were sent out.

Max Williams and Verna Johnson, both black skinned and muscular, who were acting suspiciously and arrested.

The men were taken to the station-house. A negro man appeared and he, too, was arrested. He gave his name as James Leguin.

The three women and the man were charged with being suspicious persons.
